

The Return of Martin Guerre

I. Select Bibliography (in chronological order)

- Jean de Coras, Arrest Memorable, du Parlement de Tolose, Lyon, 1561; rpt. Paris, 1565; rpt. Bruges, 1565; rpt. Paris, 1572, rpt. Paris, 1579, rpt. Lyon, 1596, 1605, 1618. English trans. of 1572 ed. as “A Memorable Decision of the High Court of Toulouse,” Triquarterly, vol. 55, fall 1982, pp. 86–103 (without Coras’s annotations).
- Guillaume Le Sueur, Admiranda historia de Pseudo Martino Tholosae Damnato Idib. Septemb. Anno Domini MDLX, Lyon, 1561.
- Janet Lewis, The Wife of Martin Guerre, San Francisco, 1941; rpt. Athens OH, 1967.
- Janet Lewis, “The Sources of The Wife of Martin Guerre,” Triquarterly, vol. 55, fall 1982, pp. 104–110.
- Le Retour de Martin Guerre* (film), 1982.
- Natalie Zemon Davis, The Return of Martin Guerre, Cambridge MA, 1983.
- Robert Finlay, “The Refashioning of Martin Guerre,” American Historical Review, vol. 93, 1988, pp. 553–572.
- Natalie Zemon Davis, “On the Lame,” American Historical Review, vol. 93, 1988, pp. 553–572.

II. Main issues:

- What did Bertrande know and when did she know it?
- Did Arnaud du Tilh operate alone or was he in league with Bertrande or with some else?
- Does Protestantism have anything to do with the episode?

III. Minor issue: What does the battle of Saint-Quentin have to do with it?